

Kyōsai: The Israel Goldman Collection
The Gabrielle Jungels-Winkler Galleries
19 March – 19 June 2022

Supported by

Kathryn Uhde

Kawanabe Kyōsai (1831–1889) was the most exciting and popular Japanese painter of the late 19th century. A child prodigy and draughtsman of the highest ability, his art is humorous, provocative, energetic, and outrageous. The exhibition will focus largely on the art of sekiga, ‘spontaneous paintings’, produced at ‘calligraphy and painting parties’ (shogakai) which were often fuelled by prodigious amounts of saké. Overlooked for decades, many of these works reveal a comical twist which plays on conventions or reflects the artist’s take on society. Alongside these spontaneous works, highly detailed studio paintings will reveal the wide subject range Kyōsai referenced as well as his revolutionary style which challenged the rigid artistic conventions of the day. The historical context of his work will be explored, revealing the great political, social, and cultural changes taking place across Japan which he captured in his art. The exhibition will include around 80 works, many of which have never been exhibited or published, and these will all be drawn from the unparalleled collection of Israel Goldman. This will be the first monographic exhibition of Kyōsai’s work in the UK since 1993.

Kyōsai was initially a pupil of the ukiyo-e artist Utagawa Kuniyoshi (1798-1861) before receiving academic training at the celebrated Kano school. He had a keen engagement with the world around him and an inexhaustible curiosity; he did not hesitate to incorporate new elements into his traditional studies. More recently he has been an important source for modern manga, tattoo artists and contemporary painters. As one of the most famous artists of his day, written records regarding Kyōsai are also abundant. There are contemporary accounts of his interactions with the first generation of Western artists, writers and diplomats to visit Japan after the country opened its ports to the West in 1854. They include the British architect, Josiah Conder, and the founder of the musée Guimet, French industrialist Émile Guimet. Kyōsai also published a self-illustrated, semi-autobiography, Kyōsai gadan, in 1887.

The exhibition will explore three themes. The first section, From Tradition to Innovation, will highlight Kyōsai’s representative works which demonstrate the variety of genres and styles in which he painted. These works, which include finely finished examples in full colour, reveal Kyōsai’s firm foundation as a trained academic painter and provide a distinct contrast to the spontaneous paintings. Thanks to his extensive mastery of the traditional practices, these works are painted with considerable freedom and invention. A highlight here will be one the most important works in the exhibition, a unique pair of 3-metre folding screens, Night procession of one hundred demons, 1871 – 1889.

The second section Laughing at Modernity will introduce Kyōsai within the historical setting of mid to late 19th century Japan. Prints and paintings depict the introduction of Western culture to Japan, encounters with Europeans and Americans, domestic political events and civil wars. In these pieces, contemporary topics are treated with humour, with human figures or 'humanised' animals often created in order to overcome strict political censorship.

The final section, The Artist meets his Public, will focus on spontaneous paintings and collaborative works. Collaboration often occurred at gatherings and it was a vital part of art making in 19th century Japan. Some of the spontaneously painted compositions are 'drunken paintings', which reveal the essence of Kyōsai's virtuosity as a painter with their wilder and freer brush strokes. Kyōsai also painted comical shunga (sexually explicit images), often impromptu in front of an audience. Additional, related works will be exhibited in the genre of 'paintings within paintings,' one of Kyōsai's recurring themes.

Organisation

The exhibition is organised by the Royal Academy of Arts, London. It is curated by Dr Sadamura Koto, Robert and Lisa Sainsbury Fellow, Sainsbury Institute for the Study of Japanese Arts and Cultures and Visiting Researcher in the Asia Department at the British Museum, and Israel Goldman, in conjunction with Dr Adrian Locke, Chief Curator, Royal Academy of Arts.

Accompanying Publications

The exhibition will be accompanied by a fully illustrated publication written by Dr Sadamura Koto as well as a book on Kyōsai's animal images, Kyōsai's Animal Circus.

Dates and Opening Hours

Press view: Tuesday 15 March 2022, 10am – 1pm
Open to public: Saturday 19 March – Sunday 19 June 2022
10am – 6pm Tuesday to Sunday (last admission 5.30pm)

Admission

From £15; concessions available; under 16s go free (T&Cs apply); Friends of the RA go free.

Tickets

Advance booking is essential for everyone, including Friends of the RA. All visitors must have a pre-booked timed ticket to enter the building. Tickets can be booked in advance online (royalacademy.org.uk) or over the phone (0207 300 8090).

Images

Publicity images for Kyōsai: The Israel Goldman Collection can be downloaded via this link. By downloading the images, you acknowledge and accept the terms and conditions. These images can only be reproduced to illustrate a review or criticism of a work or report as defined by section 30 (i) and (ii) of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

Safety measures

The health and safety of visitors and staff is paramount. Safety measures for visitors can be found on the RA website: royalacademy.org.uk/visiting-and-safety-during-coronavirus.

Social Media

Join the discussion about the exhibition online at:

Facebook /royalacademy

Instagram @royalacademyarts

Twitter @royalacademy

#RAKyosai

About the Royal Academy of Arts

The Royal Academy of Arts was founded by King George III in 1768. It has a unique position in being an independent, privately funded institution led by eminent artists and architects whose purpose is to be a clear, strong voice for art and artists. Its public programme promotes the creation, enjoyment and appreciation of the visual arts through exhibitions, education and debate.

The Royal Academy is an independent charity. It does not receive revenue funding from the government so is reliant upon the support of its visitors, donors, sponsors, patrons and loyal Friends.

For public information, please print: 020 7300 8090 or www.royalacademy.org.uk

Royal Academy of Arts, Burlington House, Piccadilly, London W1J 0BD

For further press information, please contact Annabel Potter on 020 7300 5615 or annabel.potter@royalacademy.org.uk

15.12.21